

Contents

A Note on Citation	XV
Introduction	1
PART ONE
TRADITIONAL LINES OF SCREENPLAY RESEARCH: THE QUESTION OF AUTHORSHIP
1. The American Screenwriter and Authorship	7
1.1. Writing in Industrial Production	7
1.2. Multiple Authorship: Team-Writing vs. Rewriting	11
1.3. Director and Screenwriter: The Validity of the Politique des auteurs	14
1.4. Literary Recognition: 'Hack Writer' vs. 'Eminent Author'	18
2. Re-Evaluating Screenplay Authorship	21
PART TWO
THE SCREENPLAY: PRODUCTION AND RECEPTION
3. The Role of the Text in Theater and Film	25
4. Literature in Flux	29
4.1. The Screenplay in Pre-Production, Production and Post-Production	29
4.2. Theory of Versions	36
4.3. Determining the Text-Type	40
5. The Readership: The Screenplay in the Property, Blueprint and Reading Material Stage	48
Excursus: Master Writer and Master Reader—Carl Foreman's and Fred Zinnemann's High Noon	52
PART THREE
THE NATURE OF THE SCREENPLAY TEXT
6. Film as Dramatic and Narrative Medium	63
7. The Presentation of the Screenplay Text	65
7.1. Dialogue Text and Scene Text	65
Citizen Kane Prologue	67
7.2. The Modes of Presentation	71
7.2.1. Mode Distribution	76
7.2.2. The Stylistic Paradigm	80
7.2.3. Imagery and the Language of Images	87

XIV

8. The Dialogue Text	92
8.1. Word and Image	92
8.2. Natural Conversation	94
8.3. Deviations from Natural Conversation	99
8.4. Open Spaces in the Dialogue Text	103
8.5. Dialogue Cues and Dialogue References in the Scene Text	104
9. The Elements of the Scene Text	108
9.1. Characterization	108
9.1.1. Introduction of Characters	108
9.1.2. Non-Verbal Behavior as a Means of Characterization	115
9.1.2.1. Kinesics: Facial Expression, Glance and Eye Contact	118
9.1.2.2. Haptics and Proxemics	121
9.1.2.3. Naturalistic and Formalized Non-Verbal Information	124
9.1.2.4. Decoding Non-Verbal Material: Character, Reader and Spectator	128
9.2. Narrator and Character Perspective	131
9.2.1. Narrative Agents and Focalization in Film	131
9.2.2. Narration in the Screenplay	133
9.2.3. Focalization in the Screenplay	141
9.2.4. Citizen Kane and Bob Roberts	148
9.2.5. Jacob's Ladder	154
9.3. Setting and Set Design	158
9.3.1. Setting as Spectacle	160
9.3.2. Space and Location in Relation to Character and Action	166
9.4. Color and Lighting	172
9.5. The Use of Sound and Music Effects	182
9.5.1. Sound	183
9.5.2. Music	189
9.6. Story Time and Discourse Time in the Screenplay	197
9.7. Camera, Montage and Mise-en-scène	206
9.7.1. Camera Instructions	207
9.7.2. Editing and Montage	209
9.7.3. Transitions	213
9.7.4. Image Composition: Mise-en-scène , Long Take and Intertextual Reference	216
9.8. Scene Text Elements in Synthesis	220
 Concluding Note: The Hidden Director	 230
 Appendix	 233
Bibliography	235
Index	255